1. Refer to the library guide: Getting Published http://guides.library.uq.edu.au/getting-published

2. Check if your journal is included in DOAJ (Directory of Open Access Journals): a directory that indexes high quality, open access, peer-reviewed journals https://doaj.org/

3. Search Ulrichsweb (available via the Library databases) by journal name for peer-review status of a journal

4. Confirm Impact Factor using Journal Citation Reports (available via the Library Databases)

5. Check if the journal is indexed in the major databases, such as PubMed, Embase, Scopus, Web of Science

6. Ensure publisher adheres to ethical publishing practices (e.g. is a member of COPE or WAME)

7. Check journal website to confirm accurate contact information and transparent peer review guidelines

8. If unsure contact the Scholarly Publishing Team:
   Elena Danilova  e.danilova@library.uq.edu.au
   Helen Woodman  h.woodman@library.uq.edu.au

Red Flags

1. Journal sends spam emails inviting article submissions
2. Article Processing Charges are difficult to locate on journal’s website
3. New publisher launches with a fleet of empty journals
4. Publisher employs fake impact factors and indexing platforms
5. Information regarding journal content and Editorial Board is deceptive
6. Publisher may promote the ISSN number as a sign of quality
7. Journal website does not adhere to industry standards and may include frequent grammatical errors
8. Anonymous, fictitious Editorial Board/researchers/editors listed without their knowledge/consent
9. Charges Article Processing Fees but does not deliver services such as robust peer review process; not indexed in databases; no genuine impact factor

Do not make assumptions based on one Red Flag alone but be alerted to delve deeper
